Olympic games of ancient Greece

Introduction
People from far far of destinations such as Rome will soon meet to compete in a world wide competition known as the Olympic's. This year 2024 the games will take place in July in the French city of Paris. Although it happens 1 time in 4 years it gets very popular.

Why and when did the olympics start begin?
The olympic games began in 776 BCE in the ancient Greek city of Greece. The games were started because ancient Greeks to honor Zeus, who was the leader of all gods, near Mount Olympus in a small village called Olympia. And they started every 4 years in 776 BCE because the games were held.

What sports events were held?
Initially, there were only 13 separate games running a total of 200 yards. Although they were very old and they started games like: boxing, wrestling, and chariot races. The Olympic sport was parkinson where there was only 2 rules for fighting - no eye gouging and no biting. And Pentathlon was 5 sports: horse, javelin, discus, and shot.

What were the rewards?
In ancient Greece today where winners stand on the podium with a gold, silver or bronze medal. In ancient Greece times they had received a olive leaf crown on their heads and treated like a VIP in their village.

Did you know?
Races were run naked so that runners could run quicker and men were be honored by their clothing.

Only men and boys took part and watch.

Slaves and women weren't allowed to watch or participate.

A wartime truce was declared because of Olympics and people can have a holiday.

Conclusion
The modern day Olympics restarted in 1896 in Athens. Today we see many changes happen in this world wide sporting event. Prizes are now golden medals standing on a podium. There are many new sporting games like: Skateboarding, diving, badminton and winter and summer olympic's. Sporting rules like: less strict and more safety. In ancient Greece they did it in 776 BCE and now most of the people do it in their countries.
